

Tailor-made workshops

- A JOINT COMPETENCE INCREASE

Combine competence development and problem solving in a company-adapted workshop at the Copenhagen Institute for Futures Studies

Tailor-made workshops are currently the fastest growing part of CIFS's activities, since they can be used for almost any purpose and are adapted to current demands. Workshops can rapidly and inexpensively move a company, and contribute to creating consensus among participants regarding a specific problem.

CIFS has run a number of workshops for companies and organizations in Europe, North America, Africa, and Asia with e.g. the following purposes:

- Simplification of workflow in an international corporation
- Development of internal course leaders in an international corporation
- Clarification of required competencies and qualifications for project managers in an international corporation
- Positioning of an American retail chain
- Innovation in a Danish industrial company
- Business strategy in a Danish municipality
- Promotion of future-oriented thinking among young leaders in a Middle-Eastern nation
- Future-oriented requirement specification for new headquarters of a Norwegian bank

CIFS'S WORKSHOPS ARE CHARACTERISED BY:

- Combining high professional standards with inspiration and original thinking
- Being tailored to a specific purpose on the basis of a concrete problem
- Ensuring regular dialogue between CIFS and your company in the initial phase
- Having a high degree of flexibility in preparation and implementation
- Duration of 1-? days according to your company's needs
- Makes use of futurist techniques like scenarios, megatrends, etc.
- Focusing on relevance, process and results

REFERENCE

In a situation with re-organisation in order to insure the organization against future challenges and demands, the Institute's planned workshops with descriptions of future megatrends, scenarios, and flex-cultural competencies has proven crucially important for the organization's understanding of its future work environment.
